Construction and traffic update

December 23, 2021

Winter weather and the festive season

Wintry weather and challenging road conditions arrived well before the official start of winter itself, and there's more to come, affecting many major highways in BC. Please always plan ahead by checking DriveBC, be aware that conditions can change rapidly, and always drive to conditions.

Kicking Horse Canyon Project construction will be suspended for the holiday season from 3 pm (Mountain time) December 23 until 12:00 noon on January 4. During this period, no construction-related stoppages are planned in the canyon. However, the 4.8 kilometre project area will continue to exhibit the characteristics of a construction zone. Of course, like other mountain highways, the Trans-Canada Highway may experience stoppages or closures at any time due to vehicle incidents, avalanche control, or severe weather conditions.

New look for traffic schedule stakeholder notifications

Traffic schedule stakeholder notifications issued by Kicking Horse Canyon Constructors (KHCC) have been made easier to read and follow. These notices are posted at the bottom of the Traffic Management page of the project website, and KHCC has just issued a fresh one for January 2022. Information in these notices is always subject to weather conditions and project progress. Where possible, updates are reflected in the highway status calendar, and of course, the information should always be verified with DriveBC.

Another extended (24-hour, multi-day) closure is expected during the Spring 2022 shoulder season. At this time, it is expected to last for about a month from mid/late April to mid/late May. Once confirmed, the contractor will be providing three months advance notice, i.e. by early/mid January.
